SMALL FRUITS DESIRABLE ADDITION TO HOME GARDEN

Every home garden, to be complete, should have an area set aside for small fruits such as strawberries and raspberries and other fruits that grow year after year without replanting.

Horticulturists at VPI say small fruits can be grown on a wide range of soils, but regardless of soil type, an ample supply of organic matter is essential.

Any soil which is well drained and suitable for growing vegetables is satisfactory for small fruits. Plants should be set out as early in the spring as possible, just as soon as the soil can be worked.

ICY WALKS AND STEPS

Icy walks and steps invite accidents. A sprinkle of sand or ashes will help provide a foothold, but the effectiveness of such materials is increased by adding salt. The salt can, of course, be used alone, not only on walkways but on driveways and roads that are ice glazed and give little traction to tires.

HOMEMAKERS ITEMS

A gratifying trend on the part of furniture buyers toward "selective buying" of lamps is noted by Miss Ruth Jamison, home economist at VPI.

She says that many of the lamps now available are high enough to provide light where it is needed — and this was not true not so long ago. The shades are opaque, but light, open at the top to provide upward as well as downward light. Buyers who have "Mrs. Consumer" in mind seem to be interested in lamps with style which will also give good light. Table lamps with 12S diffusers and wide harps to take the recommended R-40 150W bulb are more in demand.

Disappointingly though, says Miss Jamison, few firms have yet added CLM diffusing bowls to floor lamp lines.

Gay cotton slip covers for kitchen appliances, fine chi silver look pretty. They al time and extra dish washi covers may be bought or m expensively from bright cot ric scraps and bias binding

A group of four Appomattox Seventh-day Adventists will travel to Takoma Park, Md., on Sunday, Feb. 9, to attend the 18th bi-ennial constituency convention of the Potomac Conference of Adventists.

They are official delegates to the one-day convention, which will elect officers for the conference for the next two years.

Highlight of the parley will be the election of a new president, staff officers, and a conference executive committee. Incumbent President is Pastor Clinton J. Coon, of Staunton, who has already submitted his resignation as spiritual head for the Conference. He is retiring from active church work.

A complete report of the Tokoma Park convention will be given to the local church on Saturday, Feb. 15, at the regular church service.

MANY LADIES SERVE AS POSTMASTERS

A recent check shows the Post Office Department has 15,731 lady postmasters, which is probably the largest number of women "branch managers" of any business type operation in the world, Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield noted this week.

"With our near 16,000 women postmasters representing close to half of our entire management staff, we believe it is fair to say the American Post Office Department, through the employment of large numbers of women postmasters, recognizes the management abilities of women perhaps more than any other private or governmental organization anywhere," Postmaster General Summerfield commented.

The Post Office Department region with the largest number of postmasters, as well as the largest number of lady postmasters, figures show, is Cincimati, which includes Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana. The region has 1,836 lady postmasters of a total of 3,912.

The second area, in terms of total postmasters as well as lady postmasters, is the Washington, D. C. region, which comprises Maryland, West Virginia, and Virginia, in addition to the District of Columbia. It has 1,671 women postmasters, out of 3,214.

Many unusual women are in postmaster ranks, and many women head unusual offices.

For example, a nun, Sister Regina Francis, is postmaster at Immaculata, in Chester County, Pennsylvania. She has served in that post for more than 14 years, devoting full time to postmaster duties.

And Mrs. Francis R. Huson, of Tahuya, Washington maintains an oystering operation as a sideline.

At San Quentin, California, where the well-known prison is located, a lady, Mrs. Valate T. Ellison, is acting postmaster.

Miss Virginia Siyuja is postmaster at Supai, Arizona, at the bottom of the Grand Canyon. Her office has to be serviced by mulepack.

In the State of Virginia, there are 1,323 postmasters, and 664 of them are ladies.

WINGED "SPUTNIK"

Kimberley, South Africa.- When a competitor in the South African gliding championships had to put his craft down on a lonely farm, a woman in the farm house rushed her servant off to the next farm a few miles away for help.

When they arrived, the glider pilot discovered that the farmer's wife had sent a message saying that a "sputnik" had landed on her farm.
